While your Mom or Dad is away, what are some of the daily things you do at home? In this “clock,” draw a picture of a morning, afternoon, and evening routine you do together. What can you do when your parent at home first wakes up? How about before dinner: Can you help set the table by counting napkins or putting a placemat on the table for each person? Ask a grown-up to help you write down your routines in the matching morning, afternoon, and evening sections of the clock. Then, with a grown-up’s help, cut out the circle and attach the arrow with a metal fastener. Throughout the day, move the hand on the clock to remind everyone of the many things you do together each day.
